Overview

What is an uninterruptible power supply (UPS) system?

To reduce the risk of power supply distortion, Uninterruptible Power Supply (UPS) systems are often incorporated in electrical equipment . An UPS is designed to provide a battery-based source of AC power, such that under mains fail conditions the load can be supported for a specified period of time .

What is an ups & how does it work?

An UPS is designed to provide a battery-based source of AC power, such that under mains fail conditions the load can be supported for a specified period of time . In military and defence applications, AC supplies are not preferred because continuous power supply is of Utmost importance.

Why do we need uninterruptible power supplies?

However, during transmission and distribution, it is subject to voltage sags, spikes and outages that can disrupt computer operations, cause data loss and damage equipment. The uninterruptible power supplies protect the connected equipment from power problems and provide battery backup during power outages.

What makes a UPS uninterruptible?

Of the three main subsystems, the battery is what makes the system “uninterruptible”. Depending upon the system design, the battery can constitute as much as 50% of the cost of the UPS. Without a reliable battery, the operation of the entire data center can be put at risk.
