Overview

What is a bidirectional light emitting diode (BD led)?

We will refer to this device as a bidirectional light emitting diode (BD LED) because the light is emitted from the same active region in both the positive and negative bias regime. BD LED consists of a single III-N QW surrounded by two oppositely oriented TJs.

Can a standalone solar photovoltaic system have a bi-directional inverter?

The simulation of Standalone SPV system The scheme in Fig. 4 shows the standalone solar photovoltaic system with a bi-directional inverter at the HOMER pro simulation platform, the unidirectional converter in the existing standalone system is replaced with a bi-directional converter.

Are bidirectional light emitting diodes a semiconductor light source?

We find that the light is emitted in both directions of the supplied current, contrary to conventional light emitting diodes; hence, bidirectional light-emitting diodes can be considered a semiconductor light source powered directly with alternating current.

Why should a photovoltaic system have a bidirectional converter?

The photovoltaic systems are always supplied with storage facilities that are backed with battery power for the usage of stored power in the course of the nighttime. Availability of bidirectional converter guarantees to improve the utility of those SA-SPV systems to generate, feed, and store power to nearby micro-grids.
